The Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs)

The Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), also known as the Global Goals, were adopted by the United Nations in 2015 are the blueprint to achieve a better and more sustainable future for all. They address the global challenges we face, including poverty, inequality, climate change, environmental degradation, peace and justice. and ensure that by 2030 all people enjoy peace and prosperity.

The 17 SDGs are integrated—they recognize that action in one area will affect outcomes in others, and that development must balance social, economic and environmental sustainability. These SDGs have been specifically created to draw attention to some of the biggest environmental challenges in the world today.

- Educators can use these sub-targets to show their students the ways in which they can make an impact on improving the world that they live in.
- Students will get a greater knowledge of challenges faced not only in their own lives but also in the lives of others all around the world.
- They teach empathy to students-They give students an awareness of the wider world, and its values and identities.
- Empowers children to construct knowledge, explore values and develop respect towards Nature, which lays the foundations for an environmentally responsible adulthood in the next future.
- It helps in ensuring a better life for present and future generations.

It is in fact a part of the function of education to help us escape, not from our own time - for we are bound by that—but from the intellectual and emotional limitations of our time.
